Live image swapping in Photoshop The latest version of Photoshop, Photoshop CS6, offers a feature that enables you to edit two images simultaneously. You can compare one image with another in different ways, such as Not only can you do this live, but if you have a history list saved, you can apply the changes of the selected image to the other one. This same feature is available in the free version, Photoshop Elements. Photoshop CS6 also offers a feature that lets you live swap, or enhance, two images at one time. You can flip one image over the other, rotate them, and even add filters to one side of one of the two images, and they can all be applied at the same time. This feature is found in the paid version, Photoshop. Figure 11-2 shows examples of the live image swapping feature in Photoshop CS6. Figure 11-2: In Photoshop, you can see the live swapping of two images at once.

New features Photoshop and Photoshop Elements are often updated with new features and changes that enhance the user experience. In 2018 Adobe released Photoshop Touch, a version for Apple Watches, iPhones and iPads. In February 2020, Adobe launched Photoshop updates for iPad Pro, iPhone 11 Pro, iPad 11 Pro, iPhone 11, iPad Air and iPad Mini. Debut Photoshop debuted on April 16, 1991, more than seven years after Photoshop 1.0 made its debut. In 1995 Photoshop 1.0 was renamed Photoshop CS (Creative Suite) 1.0. It contained four programs: Photoshop, Photo Album (later discontinued), Illustrator and Photoshop Extended (later discontinued). It was the first version of Photoshop to support images on more than 1,000 continuous media pages. Adobe Photoshop Elements Photoshop Elements 2.0 In 2002 Photoshop Elements 2.0 was released, to be followed by other upgrades in 2003 (2.5), 2004 (2.6) and 2006 (3.0). Photoshop Elements 6.0 In 2006 Photoshop Elements 6.0 (also released as Photoshop Elements Personal v6) was introduced, including the ability to work with RAW files, retouch images and other imaging-related tasks. In June 2012, Photoshop Elements 8 became the new standard version of the program. Photoshop Elements 9 was released in February 2013. The Mac version of Photoshop Elements 6.0 was discontinued on June 30, 2014. In September 2014 Photoshop Elements was replaced by Photoshop Creative Cloud. Photoshop Elements 10 Photoshop Elements 10 was released in February 2015, which included a new updated user interface, new features and enhancements, and other updated software. Photoshop Elements 11 Photoshop Elements 11 was released on March 1, 2016, which added many new features and enhancements. Photoshop Creative Cloud On March 20, 2015, Adobe announced that they would be releasing the non-separated version of Adobe Photoshop Elements and Adobe Photoshop Creative Cloud as a package, ending the separation between the two. Previously Photoshop Elements did not have a Creative Cloud edition. The new package was released on June 30, 2015. The package's in-app, on-device purchases were launched by June 30, 2016 and will be available to all on July 1, 2016. The former prices of individual licences were maintained. The Lightroom CC (Creative Cloud) application was released on 05a79cccf

The Hubble Space Telescope's latest breathtaking image from the cosmos may reignite the hope that advanced alien technology exists in the universe. The photograph shows the Arp 274 galaxy, which lies 3.8 billion light years away. It seems to be the merger of two massive galaxies, and as a result, more than 500 spiral arms of star formation stretch out across the image. The merger is still in process, and remnants of star forming regions remain, while other parts of the galaxy might be breaking down, due to a lack of fuel. "The image is also intriguing because it appears to show two components merging into one — the result of a collision that took place long ago," NASA says. "A large, bright central region is aligned with the elliptical host galaxy and is experiencing tidal forces from the merger." "This galaxy could be an example of a violent galaxy merger — a giant star-forming region in a mature elliptical galaxy," the scientists added. The galaxies lie in a dwarf galaxy group known as the Tadpole Galaxy Group, and they are similar in size to our own galaxy. In fact, Arp 274 is about 150 million light years from Earth, which means it took the image only .17 seconds to get to us. As previously noted, the photo was taken by the iconic Hubble Space Telescope, which was launched 50 years ago on April 24, 1977. Over the years, the telescope has discovered over 4,000 objects and it's still going strong. In fact, it was recently upgraded with a new Wide Field Camera 3 that is capable of acquiring images with a resolution of 0.1 arcseconds, which are equivalent to five times higher than its predecessor. Amazingly, the instrument even gets sharp pictures during heavy rainfalls and cloudy weather, but it can't solve shadows, lights, and color fringing. In a blog post, Hubble has published a new set of snaps from the Galaxy Cluster and Dorado Impact Region, which was taken in October 2018. It may show a mega-supernova in the process of exploding. Like Arp 274, the image includes a large, bright central region aligned with the elliptical host galaxy, and is experiencing tidal forces from the merger. "This galaxy could be an example of a violent galaxy merger," said Adam Block of the University of Arizona, co-author on the paper. ♦

Mozilla Project Public Preferences The Mozilla Project Public Preferences service and the corresponding Mozilla.com preference service are Mozilla web services that store a list of preferences that users can define within a web browser. The preferences are defined by the user by visiting Mozilla.com, and many of them can be saved and loaded by Firefox. Mozilla.com Mozilla.com has been providing the tools to register with a preferences service since 1999. Users can add preferences by saving them and backing them up on Mozilla.com. The saved preferences can then be loaded by other sites. Most Mozilla.com Preferences that are not stored on Mozilla.com can also be stored by using the project preferences service Mozilla Project Public Preferences Mozilla.com has officially added public preferences to their support page. As of 2005, they support 24 classes of preference. The service can store preferences for any Firefox based applications, including: UserChromeJS, UserContentNotes, Addons, Components, Localization, Language, Search, Addons and About. Example: storePref("browser.newTabPage.url", "about:newtab"); See also List of Mozilla Firefox extensions External links Category:MozillaA group of Tesla owners have filed a class-action lawsuit in federal court against the company, alleging that the company misled customers about the safety of their cars. The lawsuit, filed this week in San Francisco, seeks monetary damages for Tesla's alleged "securities fraud." The lawsuit is against the Tesla Motors Inc., as well as the automaker's CEO Elon Musk and some other executives. They are not seeking specific monetary damages. That was done in a previous suit filed by shareholders. They are instead seeking a "return of value" of the shares and interest. The lawsuit was filed by five Tesla owners who bought their cars after Tesla was bought by Elon Musk and his cousins, Kimbal Musk and Lyndon Rive, in December 2008. The plaintiffs allege that the defendants "obtained billions of dollars of purchase price premiums by knowingly misrepresenting the safety of the Tesla vehicles, and engaged in securities fraud by making these misrepresentations to the public." "They essentially put this bill in our pockets by selling us defective
