The user can choose to see key words and phrases that are more likely to result in clicks. The growth in popularity of e-book readers over the past few years is good news for the online booksellers. Technology companies typically charge a small fee for the right to link to their sites. Facebook rolled out its long rumored Facebook Phone OS and Facebook Instant Articles to its app stores last week for web, iOS, Android and Windows devices. The excitement was short lived as the social network pulled back the Facebook Phone OS this week after a number of negative reviews by disgruntled users. The Facebook Phone OS is a mobile operating system that is based on the Android platform and is more akin to a Facebook version of the existing Android operating system rather than a full fledged version of Google's OS. The phone OS was first introduced by Facebook back in April when it released a limited version for T-Mobile. Since then the social media network has slowly been rolling out the feature to other platforms and operators. The reason the Facebook Phone OS was pulled is likely due to poor usability. The Facebook Phone OS has the user interface, design and features of Facebook pages rather than Android apps and a phone's native apps. propagation through the medial habenula and its relevance to anxiety. Conditioned fear is elicited by the pairing of an aversive stimulus and a conditioned contextual stimulus (CS). The CS can be visual, acoustic or olfactory. The medial habenula (MHb) is situated just above the spinal cord, and is also involved in conditioning. The main afferents are projections from the dorsal raphé and the pallidum, and the main efferents are to interpeduncular neurons. The functions of the MHb are not well understood but it is regarded as a relay structure. To investigate the involvement of the MHb in conditioned fear, its function was examined using a neurotoxic lesion. Either the MHb or the lateral part of the interpeduncular nucleus (IPN) was ablated, and the ability of animals to acquire conditioned fear was examined. Both a lesion of the MHb and IPN affected the acquisition of fear responses, but only a lesion of the MHb was able to produce persistent fear.

These observations suggest that the MHb is involved in the expression of persistent, but
