“Using these insights, we can deliver players with intelligent, reactive, contextually-aware AI that makes matches feel more realistic,” says Andrew Bell, Head of Global Technology at Konami. “We’ve expanded the gameplay experience to the defender, by capturing the player’s precise skills and reactions to improve the cognitive burden on the defender.” 22 introduces a new "HyperMotion" marker that can aid players by giving them the immediate physical feedback on their positioning on the pitch. With the new marker, players can instantly distinguish themselves from their opponents to display this advantage on the pitch. Gameplay rules have also been adjusted to ensure that teams play a higher-intensity game with greater player creativity. As well as implementing the "more attacking" rule, the new game comes with new player attributes and gameplay actions, bringing the number of players to over 900. These range from fitness and shooting to heading and crossing, adding a broad range of new tactics. For example, the 'Cruising Corner' allows players to move forward slowly and leave a cross into the box, while the 'Zoom Shot' and 'Goal Kick' allow players to strike with more power. "We've worked with the world's leading football experts to create the most authentic, realistic, and engaging football simulations of any era," says Richard Hofheinz, Senior Vice President, Global Marketing, Electronic Arts Inc. "By offering an accessible and engaging experience, we're confident that 'FIFA 22' will resonate with its core fans around the world and introduce millions of new players to the stunning gameplay and immersive match moments that make 'FIFA' so special."
