A new study led by MSc student Emily Durrant reports that moving the centre of gravity – more precisely, the centre of mass – is physically demanding, and that sitting might be just as bad. Durrant, now an independent researcher at University College London, was also part of a large and growing research effort begun in 2013 called Movement at Work. That study’s goal was to better understand the implications of people’s physical work activities and how their bodies are affected by this. While the study did not look at the ways in which walking and sitting differ in their health effects, the researchers did find that people who take regular walks have better body-weight distribution (i.e. a centre of mass that is lower, or closer to the ground). Durrant has studied other aspects of mobility to see how they can help to improve work performance. For example, the women in her study had a normal gait, or walking pattern, but they were essentially sitting all day at work, just because they had to do the majority of their work at a table. By making the table optional, their physical work engagement increased, as did workplace engagement in general. However, it’s not just the amount of time at a desk – it’s the quality of that time spent in front of one that matters. The study was published recently in the journal Workplace Health & Safety. “Workers are sitting more and more at work,” says Durrant. “We found that desk-based workers spend about one-third of the work day on their computers, and probably two-thirds on some other desk-related activity. Choker Set £3.99Price Quantity More Views Dimensions: 110mm (L-est) x 20mm (diam) with a total circumference of 220mm. These are made by Phoenix Crew and are inspired by the iconic display you see of fire above the city of Los Angeles. They are a heavyweight matte carded metal choker made up of hand stamped pages. The pages are you can replace should you lose them, and are based on a section from Outcast Book 3, River Kingdoms. The pages are fire engraved for the best possible effect. Please bear in mind when replacing the pages, the choker will lose only half of its' length. The sides of the choker remain solid and heavy. The pages can be seperated to re use. The pages are presented in the carded metal that suits each individual page well. The pages can be replaced at any time. The choker has a slightly concaved back, flush to the metal, which protects the back of the neck and gives a comfortable fit, with or without other chokers or plain pendant chains. Pages can be added or replaced without tools. Each page of fire is hand engraved, but each page is also dry brushed to highlight the fire lines. The pages are made to be re-useable, as the fire engraving is tight to the pages.Arre (praja) An Arre (older spelling: arri) is a sub-class of Indian Hindus. This unique PSP game is about Amaterasu, the First Child of the Sun God. But of course, after being abandoned by her father Amaterasu made a vow to destroy the mythical creatures and monsters. And starting in the year 2355, she conducted battles against gods and monsters called the Chaos Gate. She has been battling against monsters to protect her homeland, the deserted islands called "Nippon". However, she did not know that her battles were influenced by the Chaos Gate, which had started to influence her world. After 1000 years, that is the year 2247, Amaterasu seems to have been reborn. But why did the Chaos Gate get involved in the world of the dead? At the same time, near the border of Nippon, there were reports of some monster disturbances. And then two mysterious people with long hair appeared. What was happening to Amaterasu? And... What about the Chaos Gate? Who are the two mysterious people with long hair? Those are just some of the questions you will find out for yourself as you fight your way through the Nippon Desert. In the Nippon Desert, an adventure is waiting for you! 60 FATE points and 5 Jumps. - Battle with the ancient creatures and monsters, help Amaterasu fight against the Chaos Gate and the mysterious long-haired people - Each of the 52 chapters has 3 missions (Missions 1-3) - The players battle continuously with a single character - The CHaOS gate that is being influenced by the Sun God's curse appears in chapter 9 - The secret technique Summoning: Bring Down The House Jutsu! that can be used after leveling up your Character - There are 102 different skills to complete - Please make full use of the Hidden Leaf Defense Points, which are needed to defeat enemies - Two characters can play at the same time (AI for both are disabled) Also in Chapter 6, another character of Amaterasu appears - "What happened in the past 1000 years?" - Will you find out what kind of dark secret the world is hiding from you? Do your best to defeat the Nippon Desert. If you are unable to defeat it, then you must move on to the next chapter.
