Warhammer 40,000: Dawn of War II: Dark Seduction is the second single-player-campaign in the Dawn of War II series. It follows the events of Dark Crusade. The original and long-running Dawn of War series eventually moved away from a core 'crusader vs. the rest of the world' gameplay focus to a gradual shift from warfare to siege and conquest. As the planet was ravaged by the Scourges, the forces of Chaos and Tyranids stormed across the star-strewn galaxy, while Eldar, Space Wolves, and Salamanders faced down their enemies and sought to protect the Empire. But a rash of suicides brought the struggle to the Eridian Combine, the Dark Mechanicus, the Clades, the Orks, and more... Dawn of War II: Dark Seduction brings the struggle to the dark side. The Fourth Imperium was devastated by the Scourges, leaving the Eridian Combine, the Dark Mechanicus, and Clades fighting for control of the Imperial Star Forge. Meanwhile, Primarchs and Warriors suddenly rise in the wake of the Traitor Legions, forcing the Imperial Guard to take the fight to the front. Yet even as the Outer Rim is aflame with battle, the forces of Chaos and Tyranids lay a trap for the Imperium and its allies. One that brings both the Imperium and the Chaos Space Marines face to face in a fight to the death. Dawn of War II: Dark Seduction features

(band) Wantless are a noise rock/drone/spoken word/survival metal band based out of Ontario, Canada. Wantless have released a series of EPs: Collective Consciousness of the Obsolete, First and Next Things, Heart Lines, and Pendulum Shift. As of April 2011, they have released only 3 full length albums (Collective Consciousness of the Obsolete, First and Next Things, and Pendulum Shift), but have gone on to release another 5 EPs, most recently This Is Beautiful, Freehold, Heart Lines II: Tributaries Of A Dying Sun, and Heart Lines III: Softly Come as Night. The band has also released a series of split and live releases with other artists, including Torture Twins, Who?s Cartoonist, and Disgorge among others. History Bare Aggression (1995-2008) Wantless were formed by Martin Stewart and Catley Bowerbank in Cambridge, Ontario in 1995. WANTLESS! was set up by Warlord Recordings. In an interview with Adequacy, vocalist Stewart explained his fascination with the idea of a group of "band-like" performers sharing the stage and being forced to create something collectively without the excuse of wanting to sell albums or play shows for a living, explaining it is "hard to imagine a band more at odds with the consumerist nature of our society". Wantless released their debut EP, Perpetuum Mobile (1997), produced by their own Jimmy Edgar. The band issued their second EP, Dreamhenge (1999), and recruited drummer Joe Murphy to the line-up. The band toured frequently throughout Canada, the United States and Europe, as well as East and West Asia. With these tours the line-up reached its full five-piece configuration, which would last the next 3 albums until their dissolution: Martin Stewart (vocals/guitar), Catley Bowerbank (guitar/bass), Keith Gallivan (bass/drums), Ric Prentice (guitar/bass), and Joe Murphy (drums). Collective Consciousness of the Obsolete (2000-2002) Wantless toured while recording their debut album. In late 2000 the band returned to Glasgow, Scotland to record their debut album at Kelly's Cellar Studios. The result was the split 12" on Dinedan Records, and their first album, Collective Consciousness of the Obsolete in 2001. They debuted the album
