Let's say I'm trying to describe a metal band that is doing really well, and that people are still getting out of their seats to dance. Does the word "fantastic" imply a bigger impact, or a more varied style? Is it just adding a (1) adjective, or does it imply a change of tense? A: The word fantastic basically means "awesome". While fantastic implies that the band/artist is doing really well, it doesn't imply that the music is varied or complex. The band/artist probably does many, many different styles of music and makes good use of different instruments and performances. A: Fantastic doesn't imply bigger impact, more varied style. For a band with a bigger impact, you could say: Fantastic band! A: As a word describing a band's music that's currently very popular or successful, fantastic is indeed a great fit. It also doesn't imply that the music is more varied. It's fantastic! That's just a brief description of what a band is doing. It seems more inclined to describing a band that would be big-hit songs like ... I would say fantastic band. 0cc13bf012
