My thoughts and prayers go out to you and your family. I can't imagine the pain you're going through. I'm a younger woman who has given up on finding Mr. Right, but I have been very very happy in my life. I've enjoyed many different relationships and met countless great people. I can't think of anyone who's ever been any less than wonderful to me. No matter how screwed up my life may be (and I may have a few screws loose... don't take offense!) I'm a very balanced person and I tend to be pretty good at forgiving myself when I screw up. I do think that some people get "stuck" in their own misery because they're afraid to take that first step. What I find works best for me is to write down what I want in a relationship and don't get too attached to the idea of a specific person in order to force myself to look around. That just leaves me (and everyone) with a vast array of options and possibilities and I'm not afraid to explore them. Blink... and thinking of ways to move toward God, I will be ok... then I will think of Dad and I will remember to thank him for many things... I am ok. I am ok... Ann... YOU make me smile. Thank you for your good thoughts, your blessings, and for your willingness to share your thoughts. Sometimes it helps to hear what others are thinking. I am VERY sorry you lost your Dad. I mean very, very sorry. I have family that has experienced loss, as you know, but to lose both parents in the same year, well, that's difficult enough without
