This GUI applet is called the AutoCAD Graphical User Interface (GUI) or AUGI, and is part of the AutoCAD software package. The AUGI is programmed in an object-oriented C programming language. Other features of the program include a collaborative drafting application with the ability to store a "paper" copy of documents, as well as an advanced 3D modeling and simulation feature. These features of AutoCAD are used by professionals and the hobbyist alike. Functionality AutoCAD is a Windows-based program; however, it can be run on all major versions of the Microsoft Windows operating system (Windows 98/2000/XP). AutoCAD itself consists of several different major applications, including the following: AutoCAD LT — a simplified version of the full-featured AutoCAD for Windows or Linux, intended to meet the requirements of small and medium-sized businesses and educational institutions. It uses less memory and has fewer features than the full-featured version. AutoCAD Web App — AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT combined into one application. AutoCAD Architecture — a method to design a house or other building by creating a 3D representation of the building. This feature is primarily designed to be used in conjunction with AutoCAD LT and is integrated into the program's instruction manual. AutoCAD Raster — a raster-based GIS mapping and creation program. It is primarily used for mapping, geodesy, cadastral and satellite mapping, and land surveying. AutoCAD Imaging (Adobe Acrobat Connected) — a tool to exchange CAD models and GIS data. Other tools for creating and editing text, symbol, and web content. These tools include: AutoCAD Map 3D — a tool for creating 3D maps based on AutoCAD drawings. AutoCAD Movie Maker — a tool for creating animations. AutoCAD Web Access — an add-on package which provides access to the full-featured AutoCAD software from any web browser. An example of the foregoing is a body belt such as used by a hunter to wear a survival vest or other similar device which retains a garment to a user and permits the user to move around. The garment is generally attached to the vest using one or more straps and fasteners. Many designs are known in the art for providing such straps and fasteners. A problem with the existing art is that straps often become detached from the fastener due to the forces and the harsh environments in which the vest and straps are used. Update 6:00 p.m.: The zoo is taking no chances and closed down for the next three days, a move that means the animal won't be able to go out for quite a while. The zoo's Twitter account said the animals are safe and provided an update on the breeding strategy. "We are considering all options, including reducing the reproductive rate of some animals, to ensure the health and safety of all giraffes," the tweet said. "At this time, no decision has been made about the future breeding of the giraffes at Zoo Atlanta." Original story: The Savannah Zoo has lost its beautiful but potentially very dangerous giraffes after two of them died, zoo officials said. "Both of the giraffes we lost were part of our breeding program and it is a blow for the zoo and all of us involved," said zoo spokeswoman Megan Fox. "We have lost one calf and we lost another calf that was very close to being born." Fox said she could not discuss specifics about the animals, because of confidentiality restrictions. But she said no additional giraffes have been born at the zoo in more than a week. "Anytime a young calf dies in a conservation breeding program, it is devastating," she said. "But we have the strongest herd management in the country and have come out with a strong breeding program in the past." Giraffes can cost up to $5,000 each and are subject to the same health, diet and habitat standards as lions and tigers, said Sarah Kiely, a zoo spokesperson. "The issues we are dealing with are things like cystic fibrosis and heart problems," Kiely said. "Anytime we have a problem with one animal we are going to have to take steps to ensure that we have the best care we can give them and we are doing that." The zoo says it is taking steps to boost the herds. It also removed the giraffes' access to outside food and water to reduce the risk of illness. "The decision was not taken lightly," Kiely said. "We want to
