Occurrence of the four most frequent C677T mutations among the Vietnamese population. The C677T mutation in the MTHFR gene causes a decrease in MTHFR enzyme activity and reduced protective effect against thrombotic disease. This study aimed to determine the frequency of the four most prevalent MTHFR mutations (C677T, A1298C, G1057A, and A2756G) among patients with DVT and/or pulmonary thromboembolism (PTE) in the Vietnamese population, and their association with thrombophilia risk factors. Between May and November 2009, we recruited 392 consecutive DVT patients with either factor V Leiden (FVL) (n = 60), protein C deficiency (PCD) (n = 37), or protein S deficiency (PSD) (n = 141) from four hospitals and 265 consecutive PTE patients with a normal coagulation profile from four public hospitals. MTHFR mutations were identified using DNA samples obtained from the EDTA anticoagulated blood of these patients. We found that the prevalence of the C677T mutation was 76.4% (259/332) in all our patients with DVT, 94.3% (36/38) in FVL, 79.3% (28/35) in PCD, and 60.9% (53/88) in PSD. The C677T mutation was not identified in any of the 265 patients with PTE. The A1298C mutation was identified in 37.6% (123/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 25.0% (9/36) of the FVL heterozygotes, 8.8% (3/35) of the PCD heterozygotes, and 10.2% (5/49) of the PSD heterozygotes. The G1057A mutation was identified in 44.2% (147/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 34.6% (13/38) of the FVL heterozygotes, 5.7% (2/36) of the PCD heterozygotes, and 36.7% (17/47) of the PSD heterozygotes. The A2756G mutation was identified in 7.0% (23/332) of the C677T heterozygotes, 1.1% (4/36) of the FVL heterozygotes, 3.6%
