Hello, I have a CSV file with one of the columns containing the below data:

Empresald,Nombre,Tipo,ItemId,Descripcion,Fecha 43,Materno Infantil,1,6,"Lectura en un entorno tecnologic dns,menos de 5 años" 44,Materno Infantil,2,1,"Programa de aprendizaje digital para niños y adolescentes,menos de 5 años" To convert it to the below MySQL table in excel form:

Empresald Nombre Tipo ItemId Descripcion 0cc13bf012

The above was obtained using the following command `inRlmap() = "Materno Infantil Sharon Reeder 32.pdf"` I can for instance reproduce the same result with `search({inRlmap()}, "child")` and `search({inRlmap()}, "parent")` Note that the `inFile()` function in the MQL4 API documentation returns a list of possible strings (as far as I can see) and not an actual file path. So if you would like to get a more accurate and reliable result, I would suggest the following (I replaced the dots in the file name with a space in the given example): `option("FileNameSpace") option("FileNameSpace","child") option("FileNameSpace","parent") option("FileNameSpace","Glad Rope and Rocket Blocks, Have You Seen This? Not sure if this is actually what you need, but hopefully it might help you to get a better result. EDIT: Looks like what you are after is not directly what search() is for. This is what search() is for according to the documentation: search (String, Pattern) -> List of Matches Searches for a pattern in a string I changed the above command to look like this: search(inFile("Materno Infantil Sharon Reeder 32.pdf"), "child")` EDIT 2: Your initial problem seems to be that you are trying to search for the string `inRlmap()` somewhere in the list which is what I understood from this:

search({ inRlmap()}, "child") You need to somehow filter your result to only include the ones with the string inRlmap() you actually want to work with. I did this using the function get(). The get() function returns the first item in a list (if there is only one). The first element in a list is usually an array/list/vector of something. We can easily convert a list of elements/elements into an array. So if we just get the first element it will be something like this: [1] ".pdf"
