It's been a very good morning of using it, compared with the old days. Getting through the endless "Preparing Your Images for Export" Setting up the pressure plate to hold the shoot, and most important for me, the Lightroom behind it, to get a perfect photos, even expensive high end equipment is not appropriate for it, compared with perhaps it is possible to get the old software version 64 sucessfully. It's very fast, it's easy and a lot of thanks to the developer, you really enjoy the work. The new Version 24 Checked the most requested features in the modes, so it's very useful when you can show your images in the usual way. They got a great experience. There are still almost no filters / presets / style adjustments. Overall I think that the final version will be placed better than the beta version. Thanks for the automatic detection of objects positions between the light and the dark, and the positions of the light and the surface without any human interaction. It can allow us to create more than 56 megapixel files. And also the mix mode, which gives the opportunity to convert images that are not curves JPG files or HDR images to better ones. So we get more options to get our work. Sweetness. How I love Lightroom. While it comes with an awkward layout, but no matter how many times you try to change it, it remains consistent and easy to use. I would definitely use the current version of the programme again. Lightroom is one of the best image editors around. It has a neat and touch-friendly interface, and comes with dozens of tools for everything from the basics (add, edit, delete) to the more advanced (spot and Defringe). There are also lots of neat effects and filters and all the usual options.
