What's new (Q1) is layered PDF support, which means you can send a layered PDF-formatted file, and others can annotate it and share their comments directly on the PDF. For instance, when someone comments on a photo, you can review the comments and then perform the same actions on the photo itself. You can even close the comment, so that you can work on the picture and not get any more comments. You can also toggle the visibility of comments—or turn them off entirely. You can drag multiple layer sets into the Layers panel just like any other layers, and drag the grouped layer group back to the group panel to create a layer with no transforms. You can choose any of the layer clip paths available in Photoshop to quickly toggle the visibility of layers. The new Actions panel adds the ability to create a single Action that can be performed on multiple files or layers via the context menu. This works as if you were saving a file with an Action named "New Action," and the Action could be selected from the Actions panel's Contents menu or created from scratch, giving you a new way to accomplish common tasks. You can even see all the actions in your Actions panel, so you can find the "New Action" if you want to reuse it on other files. The new Perspective Warp tool gives you creative control over perspective so you can distort a photograph without adding weirdness. The new Clone Stamp tool adds the ability to edit other layers through a brush, on a white background, so you can restore or remove any color or detail from any part of an image.
