Related to the Files panel are the media types available. While you may know your files as JPEG, GIF, TIFF, PDF or a more obscure file type, video types will include AVI, MPEG and MP4 files. With your images and videos in your library, you can sort and group them or place them in a smart browser. One of the biggest improvements is the Search function. Everything you can do with the scrollbar finds anything, from the first letter to the last. Searching works much better than earlier versions of Elements. Create slideshows, smart collections, e-mail and share them using the panels. The InDesign SmartArt feature enables you to add graphics to your page. Less frequently used includes the Watercolor mode, a Pencil tool and a handful of special effects, all found in the Brush panel. The New Features panel is filled with new tools to enhance your workflow. The Dimension tool lets you place an object on another object and alter its size. The Shape tool allows you to draw either closed or open paths. There are two tools that provide templates, icon sets and brushes so you can get started right away. Lightroom 5 is based on Photoshop CS6 and is now an all-in-one, all-in-one image editor and library manager. The program's strong feature set should make it an excellent contender for those who want to combine video and stills. One of the most exciting new features is that you can help improve a photo by using an "exposure preview" and the Lens Correction Tool. This lets you look at an image through an artistic filter designed to adjust the overall exposure. This is a new and powerful feature for Lightroom.

What it Does: All the things. Yep, the Blend mode feature lets you combine colors in various ways, such as creating different shades of gray or mixing various color shades together. There are several ways to blend images along a gradient. There are layers you can apply Blend Modes to; there are preset blends; and, most amazingly, there are Blend Modes you can create yourself. The stars' color mentioned earlier should probably be sunlike, but this is not always seen. The sun appears to be black in comparison to some of the red stars, especially when it's in the southern hemisphere. A close-up of Betelgeuse, the star that glows in the Orion constellation, is a brilliant object in comparison to the background stars. The type B star is more than two thousand times brighter than the sun. It's one of the most brilliant stars in the sky. Our sun is a type G, which is seen on the Earth's edge along the ecliptic. The sides of some red stars have wisps, nebulae or dust. This is due to the outgassing of gas, which is a process by which a star's gases are expelled into space in spurts, giving the appearance of a mist. Red giants are popularly called asters. Some red giants are older-looking. They're commonly seen in the Andromeda Galaxy and various clusters. Red dwarfs are small, cool stars. They generally look blemish-free, and for the most part they are single.
